Necessity Of Sustaining Livelihood In Rehabilitating Urban Poor

Development projects always ends up with the rehabilitation of the affected people. There is a group of unprivileged community who always struggles as a result of improper rehabilitation policies by the authorities. The post occupancy issues of these communities are not taken care off by the authorities and are not discussed elsewhere. They struggle as a result of development while others enjoy the privileges. Case studies from different parts of India with similar characteristics are analysed and the negative impacts of development on each cases are discussed. Further towards the end the possible remedies that can be adopted in these cases for a better rehabilitation are also analysed. Finally, this research aims at establishing the issues of the rehabilitated communities especially the urban poor through various case studies in India and the necessity of a proper guidelines in the rehabilitation of the poor in India.
